

Departmental Seminar

The Psychology of Language and Communication

11:00 a.m. – 12:00 p.m. | October 28, 2016 (Friday)
Social Sciences Chamber | 11/F The Jockey Club Tower | Centennial Campus
The University of Hong Kong

Dr. Julie Evans

Faculty Tutor Brain Sciences
University College London

Abstract

Language is unique to humans and is vital for social interaction. This talk will discuss the importance of language and communication in humans, how language develops, important brain areas for language and the effects of brain damage or disorder on language. This talk will be of interest to people wishing to study Psychology, Language Sciences or Linguistics as an undergraduate or Masters degree. There will also be a brief presentation of programmes of study relevant to these areas.

~All are Welcome~

Enquiry: m.dadourian@ucl.ac.uk | Dr. Julie Evans