The Nuts and Bolts of Writing Journal Articles

11:00 a.m. – 12:00 noon  |  October 17, 2017 (Tuesday)
Rm 813, 8/F, The Jockey Club Tower  |  Centennial Campus  |  The University of Hong Kong

Abstract
Writing journal articles can be challenging at the best of times. There is no one successful formula that works for all of us, but there are some basic approaches that the majority of scientist would agree with. This talk will highlight some of the essential do’s and don’ts of writing clear journal articles, followed by a broader discussion with the audience on their own frustrations with writing journal articles – and how these frustrations may be overcome.

Writing a Successful Grant Application

11:00 a.m. – 12:00 noon  |  October 18, 2017 (Wednesday)
Rm 813, 8/F, The Jockey Club Tower  |  Centennial Campus  |  The University of Hong Kong

Abstract
Getting funds for research is becoming harder and more competitive, and yet our research activities in Psychology invariably require funding, and research productivity is critical to promotion and tenure.  This seminar aims to provide broad, overarching strategies for writing a successful grant application, together with participants sharing their own experiences to date. Topics to be covered include common problems with applications, the art of communicating research ideas, writing with impact, and characteristics of grants that are successful.
